

Minibeast Safari

Minibeasts live almost anywhere and the best place to find them is in your back garden. You can go on a minibeast safari; all you need is a bit of string (or wool) about the length of your arm (the longer your string, the further you'll travel on safari).

1. Find a place in your garden or in the park you want to travel through minibeast style
2. Lay down your length of string, it can be a straight or wobbly line
3. Lie down on your front and travel along your safari route
4. Look at all the places your minibeast may be hiding, lift stones or twigs in case there is something hiding underneath, make sure you put it back though as it may well be someone's home.
5. If you take an insect ID book with you can find the names of the minibeasts you find
6. If you take a magnifying glass, you can have a much closer look
